The Valve and Actuator Manufacturers Cluster of South Africa (VAMCOSA) unveils a revitalization initiative aimed at driving local industry standards and expanding global market reach. According to newly elected chairman Tshepo Mabona, "we have reinforced vision to promote local products, both within State-Owned Enterprises (SOEs) and the private sector, VAMCOSA in collaboration with the South African Capital Equipment Export Council (SACEEC), is committed to ensuring that South African-made valves and actuators are synonymous with high standards and quality."

In line with its rejuvenated strategy, VAMCOSA places a high priority on skills transfer within the manufacturing industry, aiming to ensure that local manufacturers meet international best practices and quality norms.

As part of this effort, the cluster not only advocates within government circles to further industry interests but also works hand-in-hand with SACEEC to broaden its reach into lucrative export markets through organized trade shows and business missions. The revitalization includes a comprehensive alignment of goals such as promoting localisation, empowering industry transformation, and establishing a respected quality brands to represent South African products.

Membership Benefits

Joining VAMCOSA offers members numerous benefits, including the development of joint export strategies and increasing access to global markets. Moreover, advocating for the local procurement of manufactured products supports the overall growth of South Africa's economy by stimulating demand and enhancing manufacturing capabilities.
